Every Barnard student knows the value of academics - but what really makes the complete Barnard experience is the Student Life. There is so much that the Barnard campus offers its students. The campus is a big attraction and social center for students. Whether it is laying out catching some rays, having a snowball fight or eating at a campus bar-b-que, the Lehman Lawn is always full of Barnard students. There is a reason the most coveted thing about spring is having your class taught outside. The Residence Halls also provide an invaluable part of the Barnard experience. Living and working side by side with your fellow classmates creates a bond between students that lasts a lifetime. The student center McIntosh is also a center for social interaction. Whether its meeting your friends for a quick bite between classes, or now, going to class, McIntosh is always full of busy students laughing, chatting and studying. Besides the campus itself, Morningside Heights is a great place to socialize, eat, shop and sightsee. Either way you look at it, Barnard, Columbia Campus and Morningside Heights are great places to enrich your college experience. Barnard's cozy campus provides its students a wealth of opportunities.

A day in the Life...

Barnard's campus is a unique enclosed segment of the city. Centered in Morningside Heights in Manhattan, Barnard's lush green campus is a landmark in its own right.

Chillaxing

Remember what it was like? You get out of your cab in front of Barnard in the sweltering August heat. You brought what you thought would be invaluable for your first year away from home. Pictures, stuffed animals, CDs, movies and all the little things that would make this new place seem like home. After you sign in, get your keys and ID, you get to your room. Stark white walls, empty furniture, foggy windows, communal bathrooms? This was definitely not like your other home. You meet your roommate, awkward at first but soon you get to know one another, you meet the girls down the hall, your RA takes you to Convocation and College Night. You settle in for the night, exhausted by the newness of it all. As you close your eyes, you realize that, though its completely different, you are home – Barnard is your new home.

Four years down the line, we're moving out. Looking for apartments or heading home for a while. We have gotten used to brushing our teeth with our neighbors, giggling in the hallways until 3am and eating with our friends in kitchen nooks or dinning halls. The life of the resident hall has become second nature to all of us. It's the place where we learn, live, sleep, laugh and make our memories.

Class of 2005

Students goof around with each other in various residents halls. Most seniors can be found living in the Sulzberger Tower, 620 or Columbia's East Campus. Whether its giving piggy-back rides, climbing through packing materials or simply hanging with friends and roommates, home is the place to be.

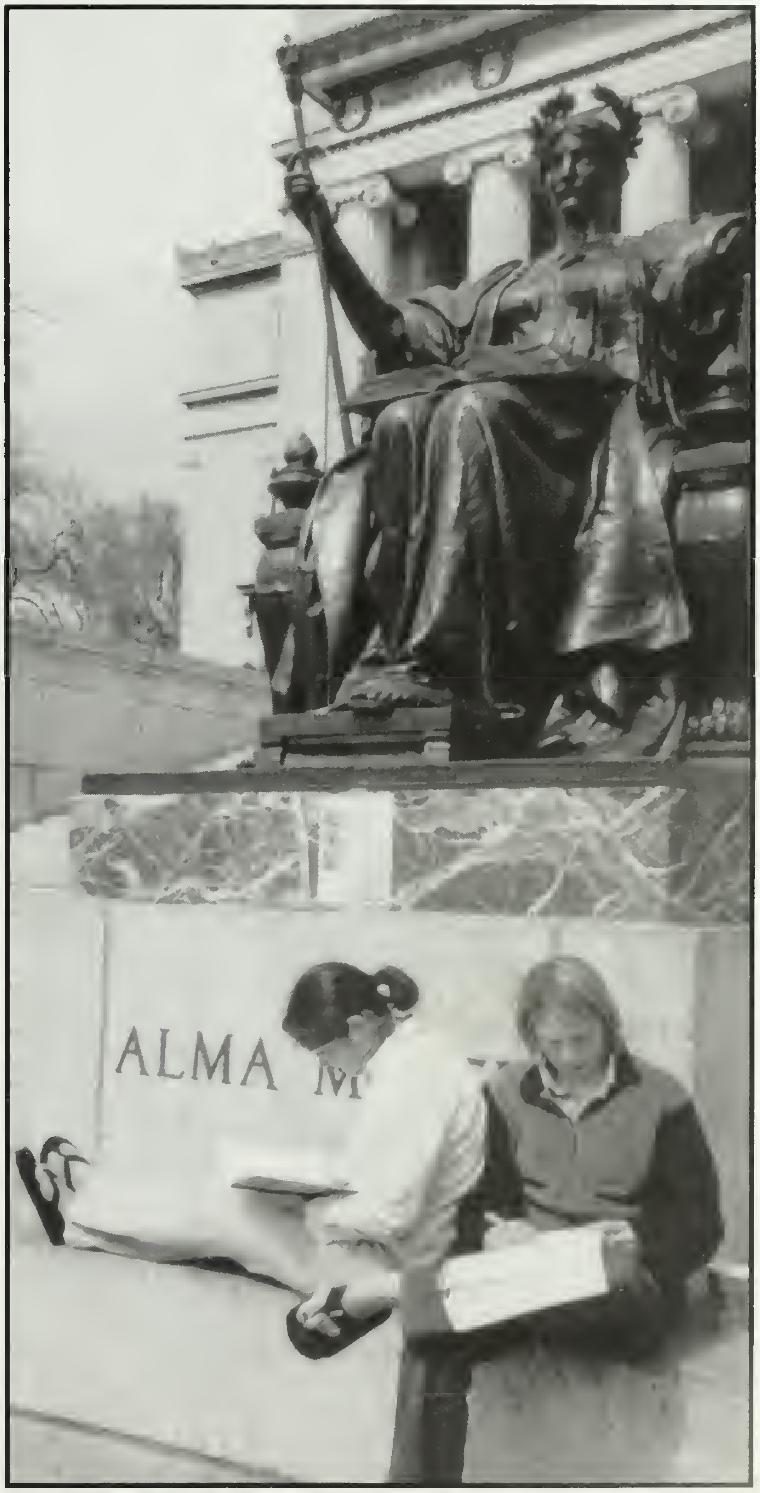
Working Under the Sun

Weather permitting, Lehman Lawn is the ideal study center for students who crave knowledge and the sun. Other favorite spots for a quick read include benches in front of McIntosh Center, South Lawn, and the steps by the Alma Mater across the street.

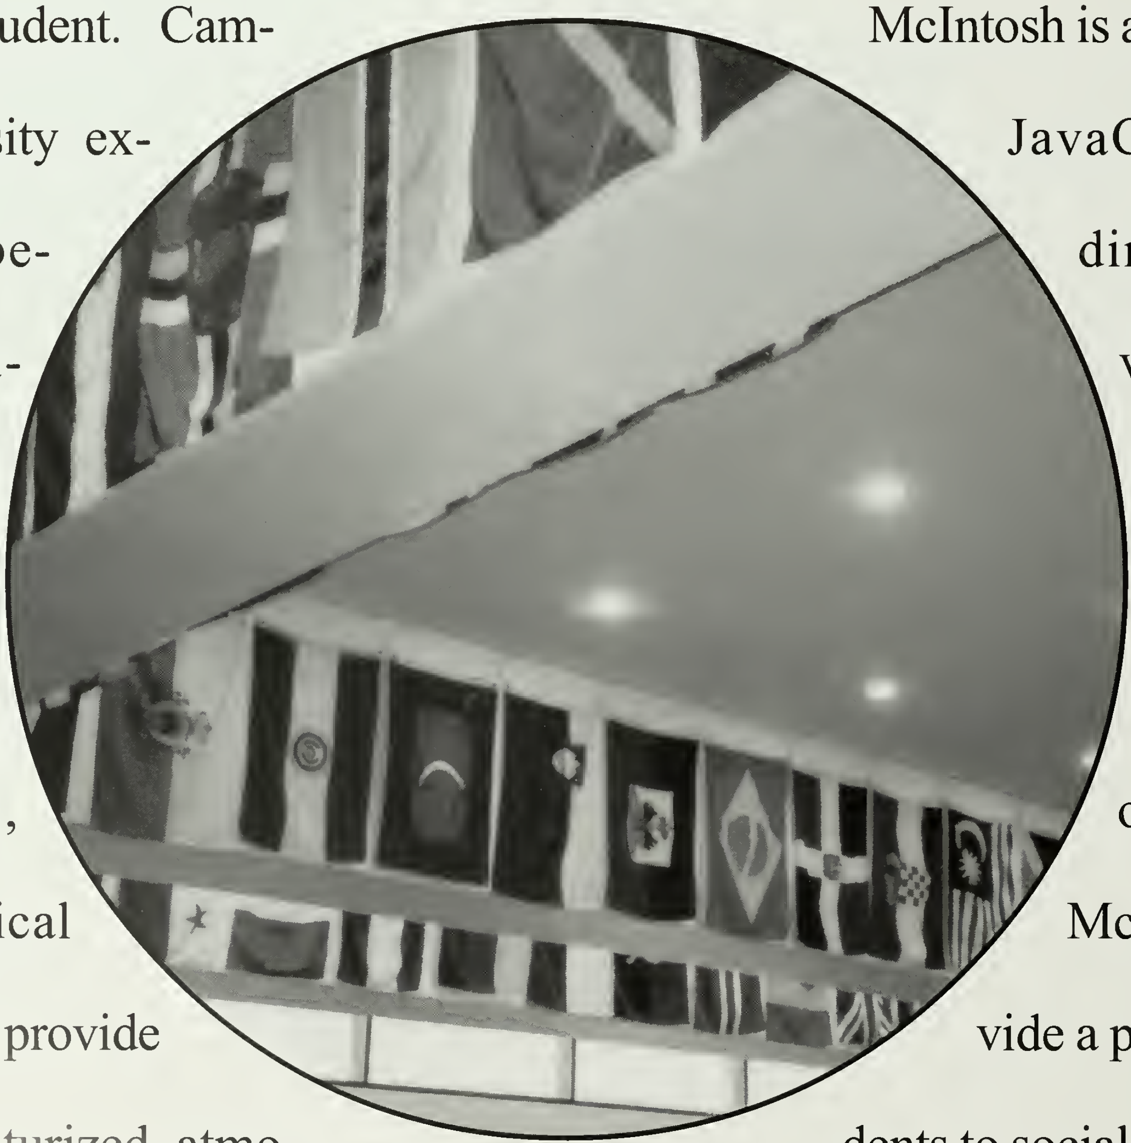
by: Carol Ng

When its nice out, students often study through Barnard and Columbia campuses. If you have to cram for that exam, you might as well get to enjoy your study space.



Grabbing a Cup of Coffee Between Classes

On the ceilings of McIntosh hang the national flag of the country of every Barnard student. Campus diversity extending beyond nationality to religion, sexual orientation, and political affiliations provide a rich texturized atmosphere from which all can learn from one another in almost all aspects of life. Aside from its symbolic role, McIntosh is also home to JavaCity Cafe, dining services, mailboxes, and WBAR. The tables outside of McIntosh provide a place for students to socialize and hold events in the heart of Barnard's cam-



Students pause to collect thoughts over a cup of coffee. Others stop by to check e-mails, or to grab a quick bite.

Students never lack of a variety of foods or of entertainment; Morningside Heights has plenty to offer on both accounts. One can grab a quick bite at Hamilton, perk up with a cup of coffee from Starbucks, have breakfast at Nussbaum, or hang out at Tom's, the restaurant made famous by Seinfeld. Whether you head over to use one of the 22 libraries, relax on the steps, or to stage a protest on College Walk, Columbia has become an integral part of your college experience. faculty and administration

One of the most integral parts of the Barnard experience is the role and impact of the faculty and administration. Each student at Barnard has at least one professor or administrator that has changed their experience at Barnard. Every individual that works on this campus has an attachment of some sort to Barnard and it is evident in the care and dedication with which they interact with students. Administrators save students when they are running to turn paperwork in 5 minutes before, or even after, the deadline. They also help answer all the questions we think of in the wee hours of the morning. The Barnard Administrators are some of the most valuable and patient people on this campus. The faculty are some the most important and meaningful members of the Barnard community. Whether it is trying to keep their classes interesting with role-playing and interaction, hosting field trips or just delivering their lectures with a level of enthusiasm, the professors here manage to make quite an impact on their students. Their dedication and reputations are what make Barnard the powerful academic center it is.

Dear Members of the Class of 2003 ~
No matter where the next years take you, this yearbook will remain your portal to Barnard. As you flip though the pages, you'll look back in the quad, sitting on Lehman Lawn in the spring, taking notes at a lecture, meeting a friend for a latte at Java City. I assure you that this book will mean even more to you decades from now, when you will smile at the photos of classmates and find yourself nostalgic with memories for your Barnard home.

You had a great time more often than not, and you learned more from each other than you ever thought possible. The Mortarboard is a wonderful souvenir of reality - a collection of faces and faculty, athletics and events, candid encounters and thoughtful writing. Treasure it. And return to Barnard often to remind yourself of all the you gave to this campus and all that your time here gave to you.

I look forward to hearing about the next chapters in you lives.

With all good wishes and affection,
Judith Shapiro

Provost of Barnard College

Elizabeth Boylan

The Provost of Barnard College is a member of the President's Council. This role allows the Provost to participate in the formulation of College policy while also being in charge of faculty governance. She presides at Faculty meetings and chairs the President's Advisory Committee on Appointments, Tenure and Promotion, the Faculty Budget and Planning Committee, the Faculty Grants Committee, and the Barnard Medalist Committee.

Elizabeth S. Boylan, was named Barnard's Provost and Dean of the Faculty in July 1995, and served as Acting President in Fall 2000. Provost Boylan is also a professor of biological sciences with tenure and came to Barnard from Queens College/CUNY where she was associate provost for academic planning and programs.

Dean of Barnard College

Dorothy Denburg

The Dean of the College is responsible for the supervision of the services that support and enhance students' lives at the College, including Admissions, Dean of Studies Office, the Registrar, the Office of Disability Services, the Office of Multicultural Affairs, Residential Life, College Activities, Career Development, Student Life and the Health and Counseling Services.

McAC Midnight Breakfast yum.
AC Midnight Breakfast yum.

Dorothy Denburg is a proud Barnard alumna who believes that the College changed her life in dramatic and positive ways. She is a warm, welcoming presence on campus and strives to make the lives of her students at Barnard the best they can be.

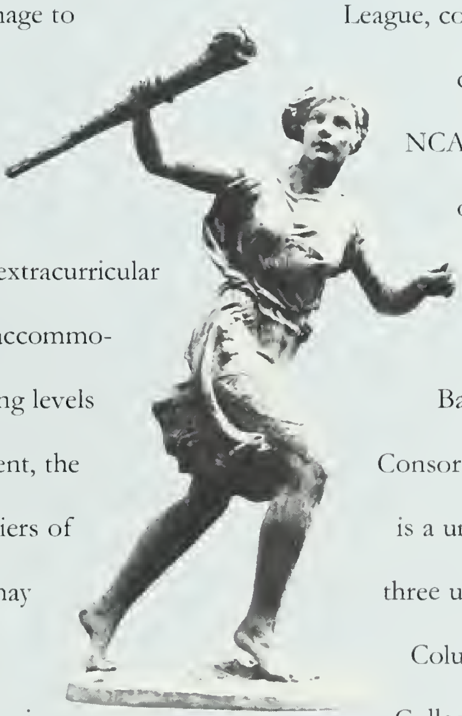
sports



Sports are treated with the same determination, dedication and rigor as Academics at Barnard and Columbia. The women on the collegiate teams manage to balance their practices, games and events along with their demanding academic and extracurricular schedules. In order to accommodate students with varying levels of ability and commitment, the University offers three tiers of competition. Students may participate in NCAA Division I Varsity Sports, in a number of Clubs, and a wide variety of intramural sports. Varsity athletes at Barnard College truly represent the finest in athleticism and academics. They strive to attain their academic goals at one of the finest liberal arts colleges in the world, while simultaneously competing at the highest level of athletics. They compete at the NCAA Division I level within the Ivy League, considered one of the most competitive leagues in the NCAA. Barnard College is the only women's college that competes at the Division I level. The Barnard/Columbia Athletic Consortium, established in 1983, is a unique collaboration of the three undergraduate divisions of Columbia University, Barnard College, Columbia College, and the School of Engineering and Applied Science, enabling women from the three schools to play on the same varsity teams. Sports advocates the leadership and teamwork skills valued so highly at this Ivy League Institution.

clubs and activities

Every student at Barnard tries to give back to the college. In addition to Academics, most Barnard students play a role in some of the college's many clubs and activities. Getting involved in a club is a great way to see your ideas come to fruition and to create a bond between yourself, the college and your fellow students. Student groups at Barnard are advised by the College Activities Office. Each organization has an assigned advisor in the College Activities Office but know that everyone on our staff is eager to help out. Barnard has many clubs and organizations that cover a wide range of interests. Can't find a group that fits your needs? Remember that any group of 10 students may form a club by presenting a constitution to the SGA.

Student Government

As one of the most influencial and active groups on campus, the Student Government Association plays a major role in the lives of Barnard students. They help to coordinate events such as blood drives, the giant sub sandwich and the senior toast. In addition to social activities, SGA also works hard to make the voice of the students heard in policy and academic debates. They have worked to have the mailroom hours extended, make the students' concerns heard concerning the residential housing situation during the summer months and many others, just to name a few.

THE 5 Specific Goals of the Senior Experience:

1. Enhance awareness of, and support seniors dealing with, personal transition and adjustment issues.
2. Provide seniors with opportunities to enhance their professional skills to facilitate a smooth transition from the academic to the professional world.
3. Assist seniors in their preparation for postgraduate education.
4. Identify strategies to effectively plan for practical post-college life maintenance and decision making.
5. Encourage a sense of unity and community among the senior class.

Emily Gregory Award

The McIntosh Activities Council in conjunction with the Alumnae Association of Barnard College and The College Activities Office honored Professor Rajiv Sethi at the 29th Annual Emily Gregory Award Dinner on April 1. Barnard Junior Sylva Hsieh nominated this year's recipient Associate Professor of Economics Rajiv Sethi. The award is given to celebrate and honor Professor Sethi's excellence in teaching and service to the Barnard College community.

A yearly tradition since 1975, the award is named after former Columbia University Professor Emily Gregory, who came to CU in 1889. Gregory was the first woman ever to be awarded the title of full professor at CU, and among the first women in the United States to receive a doctorate in an era during which women were largely excluded from the realm of higher academia.

Being located in the heart of Manhattan attracts many students interested in all incarnations of art. One of the features of Barnard is the overwhelming Performing Arts hosted by the college. There is a variety of choices for the student interested in participating whether it be in the form of an academic study in the Dance or Theater Department or broadcasting your message and ideas via WBAR, Barnard's Radio Station. Accapella groups, Glee Club, Marching Band and the Orchestra provide the opportunity for students to express themselves musically. Orchesis, a campus favorite, allows students to coordinate, choreography and perform in various dance productions at the end of each semester. Also, the annual Varsity Show, notorious for poking fun at the colleges, is written, produced and directed by students and is always a hit. Needless to say, this is one talented school.

Orchesis: a dance group

Here is what they are all about, but you really have to see them in action. Orchesis is the one and only student-run dance organization at Columbia University. They offer performing, non-performing and social opportunities alike. Orchesis hosts master classes, both by professional dance teachers and by their own dancers from the Columbia University community, plan affordable field trips to concerts in New York City such as Alvin Ailey, The New York City Ballet and The Donkey Show, and produce major dance concerts of their own every semester. The Orchesis showcases are one of the events each semester that garner such a large attendence. Pieces are choreographed to popular music and classical pieces - always fun!

Barnard Dances at Miller and Minor Lathem

Each Spring, Barnard Seniors perform in the annual Thesis Festival at Columbia's Miller Theatre and Barnard's Minor Lathem Playhouse, fulfilling their senior requirements on stage.

Dance majors end their senior year by choreographing and staging their own works.

In addition to presenting original choreography Barnard Dance majors work with professional choreographers. This year Barnard Seniors had the chance to work with world famous guest choreographers Medhi Bahiri, Yuriko Kikuchi as well as esteemedDepartment of Dance Faculty Lila York and Donlin Foreman. Spring 2003 marked the premier of the works Spring, Shoot the Moon, Cascade and a reworking of the classic Steps in the Street.

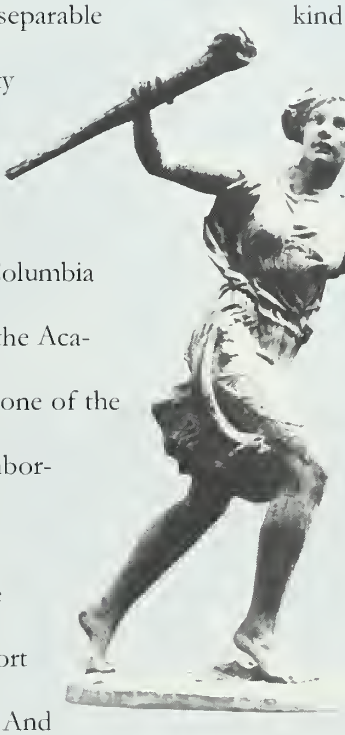
new york city

One of the major benefits of Barnard is being located in New York City, the Cultural Capital of the World. The Barnard experience is inseparable from the New York City experience.

Morningside Heights, home to Barnard and Columbia University, is known as the Academic Acropolis and as one of the city's most diverse neighborhoods. Historic Harlem, Spanish Harlem, and the Upper West Side are short distances from campus. And the 116th Street subway stop near campus means that Chinatown, the East Village, or Lincoln Center are accessible to students in minutes. Add internship possibilities and the result is a unbeatable combination.



The College integrates the city into its courses and daily life. Barnard students are cultured, streetwise, self-assured. That kind of attitude comes with attending a college located in New York City and committed to the achievements of women. The College's involvement with the city means extraordinary intellectual and cultural opportunities. Barnard students enjoy curricular links and internships with the best New York can offer. Many students have the opportunity to work at some of the city's top law firms, museums, television and radio stations and non-profit organizations. In addition, New York City provides a wealth of social opportunities.

year in review

While the women at Barnard spend a majority of their time devoted to academia, sports, clubs and activities, they cannot ignore the world around them. Many of the students are avid watchers and readers of the daily news and often are personally affected by it. This year there were many events in the media that touched the student body. From the World Trade Center Memorial design to the War in Iraq to the passing of many beloved leaders and entertainers, this past year has not been easy. What follows is a brief look back at the stories and scandals, the war and peace, the losses and the triumphs of the past year. Events that all Barnard Women have heard of, or were personally affected by. This stories cannot go unnoticed and when looking back at this book, will help place these four years of our lives into a worldly context rather than focusing specifically on the collegiate experience.

Jackson Scandal in Germany

The King of Pop is once again in the media spotlight – this time for dangling his young song, Prince Michael II, out a hotel window eighteen meters off the ground. Jackson's son was displayed out the window to fans below his Berlin hotel room, Prince's face was covered by a white cloth, presumably to prevent the child becoming a target for kidnappers. The incident has caused Jackson to once again come under fire from media critics.

Rhode Island Nightclub Fire

At least 96 people were killed in a nightclub fire in Rhode Island. The blaze began as a result of pyrotechnics used by the 80s hair band Great White. The owners of the nightclub claim to have not known the band was planning to use fireworks but the band insisted that their manager set it up with the club. Due to its size and the date it was built, the nightclub did not have a sprinkler system which allowed the blaze to spread as quickly as it did. The was the second fatal incident in a US nightclub that month. The previous week 21 people died and over 50 were injured in a stampede at a Chicago nightclub when a bouncer used pepper spray to break up a fight.

North Korea also admitted that it continued to work on building its own bomb despite a 1994 agreement with the United States that supposedly put a stop to such efforts. Rebuilding

Huge statues of Saddam Hussein crumbling in Baghdad and other cities in Iraq symbolically reflected the aparent end of his regime. We don't know if he's alive or dead. If he is alive, we don't know where he, his two sons and other top aides may be hiding out. But we do know this: Three weeks of war in Iraq have resulted in the U.S. military taking charge of the center of Iraq's capital city.

August 2002 ~

WORLD NEWS

We also know several other things: That many of the worst-case scenario fears that dominated our thinking before the war have not yet materialized. There have been no signs that Iraqis have used chemical or biological weapons. The nearly 900 Iraqi oil fields around the country are basically secure. There were some 17 Iraqi surface-to-surface missiles fired at Kuwait but only one caused any serious physical damage and only one light injury. The others were either intercepted by Patriot air-defense missiles or fell harmlessly into the desert sands of Kuwait or the water of the Persian Gulf. But with Saddam Hussein's fate still unknown, the United States, Britain and coalition supporters have sent a powerful message. President Bush had insisted he was determined to get rid of Saddam Hussein's regime. On that front, his mission seems to have been accomplished. There are still huge dangers ahead for the more than 100,000 U.S. and British troops inside Iraq. Some analysts might start suggesting the troops are simply now engaged in a "mopping up" mission. But "mopping up" can still result in deaths and serious injuries given the remaining Iraqi military capability still out there, even if it's largely disorganized and sporadic.

One of the things about Barnard that gives it that close community feeling is the sense of tradition and history that surrounds the campus and many of its events. The return of the Greek Games brought back a tradition that was popular in the first years Barnard was in session. Events such as the Dance Marathon and Columbia Community Outreach allow students a chance to give back to the community while having a great time. Newer traditions like the Giant Sub Sandwich and Spirit Day showcase the enthusiasm and energy of our students.

Take Back the Night breaks the silence of sexual assault perpetrated against members of our community as well as all men and women who are survivors of violence. Midnight Breakfast and Orgo Night is one of the campus' most notorious (and loudest) events of each semester. Faculty and Administrators serve breakfast to students while music blasts and exam tensions are forgotten for a brief moment. Students celebrate with the Columbia Marching Band as papers rain from the Quad windows.

The first Take Back the Night march, held in April of 1988, was to protest sexual assault and rape. Today, more than a thousand participants march through the streets of Morningside Heights to reclaimthe streets and take back the night. Beginning at Barnard Hall and directed by March Marshals, the march snakes through blocked-off roads, culminating in a speak-out on Lehman Lawn.

Hey, hey, ho, ho, this sexist bullshit's got to go. Whatever we wear, wherever we go, yes means yes, and no means no. University silence perpetuates the violence. Take back the day, Take back the night, Take back our bodies, Take up the fight. Women unite! Take back the night! Hey, hey, ho, ho, this sexist bullshit's got to go. Whatever we wear, wherever we go, yes means yes, and no means no. University silence perpetuates the violence. 'Twas the Night Before Finals

With the band playing, students dancing, and notes thrown out the window, you would never know it was the night before finals. A celebration of the end of another semester and a de-stresser at the same time, orgo night, so named because it is the night before the Organic Chemistry final at Columbia, is a night of revelry. The band traverses the campus, beginning with a performance of jokes and music at Butler Library. Meanwhile, over at Barnard, faculty and administration serve up pancakes, waffles, crepes, sausages, and fruit. Fed and entertained, students sink into a blissful sleep.

After years of hard work and determination, the final days of senior year are the ultimate culmination of our past four years. Barnard women work exceptionally hard and their achievements show their skill and dedication. The Class of 2003 was an exceptionally involved and tightly knit class. In the past four years, we have made friends that will last a lifetime, faced and conquered adversity, been broken by defeat and lifted by success. From our very first roommate or mates our as First Years, to those we shared apartments with Senior Year, we have learned to balance our lives, work and friendships. Our RAs helped us understand the ways the college worked. Soon we had mastered our domain and felt as though we were on our own for the first time. We have come a long way since that day in August of '99 when we stepped onto the Barnard campus for the first time.

Seniors party all night at the Senior Ball followed by the After Party at Webster Hall.

One of the many perks of being a senior is getting to stay on campus for an extra week after all the other students have left in preparation for the Commencement Exercises. To fill up this time, the Senior Week Committee organizes many events open to seniors to celebrate this special time of year. There are a variety of activities to participate in from a Yankees game to the Senior Ball to a day at Six Flags Great Adventure. The calendar keeps seniors pretty busy. The annual Intrepid party was replaced this year by the colleges taking over South Street Seaport and dancing the night away. The Bronx Zoo, Laser Tag and even the chance to see The Matrix Reloaded before it had been released in theaters caused quite a rush at the Lerner Box Office. The week rounded off with the Senior Ball at Chelsea Piers and a dessert social and toast for the parents and all the graduates. Then onto Graduation!!!

One of the best things about college is the celebration of Commencement and the ability to showcase the achievements and work of students. Perhaps the only ones prouder of their accomplishments than the students are their parents. The faculty, administration and heads of campus offices also join in the celebration of the graduates whom they have worked with and come to know through their four years at Barnard. This section of the Mortarboard is for Momentums that parents and campus offices have sent to us sending their greetings and congratulations to their daughters and the Class of 2003.

From cradle to the wedding canopy
From nursery rhymes to Shakespeare
We watched you grow, mature and have fun with pride, satisfaction and many moments of joy.

Anna Ansari

From the early days of your life, even before you started walking, I could tell that this child was going to have a very independent personality along with a sharp mind. As you grew older, you proved accuracy of my prediction. On your graduation, I am convinced that with your intelligence and personality, you will achieve whatever your mind sets as your goal. REMEBER, I WILL ALWAYS LOVE YOU UNCONDITIONALLY!

As a child, you made our hearts sing.
A precocious cherub who augur'd Spring.
Like the petals of an unfolding rose,
Your talents blossomed in both poetry and prose.
From Whoville to Oz to the land of the Renaissance sage,
All the world was forum, your very own stage.
And now you've come to a season unlike any under the sun.
We bid you our love, Godspeed and a lifetime of fun.

Editor's Note

As I sit here in the yearbook office about 20 hours before my plane leaves to take me home to Arizona, I find it very difficult to write this note. When I was planning the book, I thought I would want to add an "editor's note" at the end of the book as so many of my editors before me have done. It is a place where I can say something to all of the Barnard Senior Class and community that will see this book. I've been staring at this screen for about 2 hours hoping that I will have a flash of brilliance but all I can come up with is thank you. I think that sums it all up. I want to thank each and every person that works at Barnard, everyone who is a student, a friend, a classmate, an advisor – even the people that have walked through the gate once, never to return. Every person that has ever had a remote connection to Barnard has contributed to making me the person that I am today.

I remember the summer between my sophomore and junior years of high school when I came to Barnard, and New York, for the first time. I was taking part in the Pre-College Program and getting a taste of what college could be like. I fell in love with Barnard the minute the cab pulled up to the front gates. So I came here for college. Many times in the past four years, I have felt that it was the worst decision I could have made (usually around finals and thesis dates). I have hated this school and the work and the stress and the perfectionist in me that drives me as hard as it does. But I do not regret coming here.

Looking back – I love this school. I could not have made a better decision in my life, than deciding to come to Barnard. It has given me an education I could have never dreamed of. It has given me the chance to be an RA for 3 years and be able to be a part of a supportive community and to be there for students who might not know who to turn to. It has given me the chance to DJ at WBAR – something I never thought I could do. It has given me the chance to be "in charge" of the book that represents the past four years and our time together. It has given me the most wonderful, loving, powerful, supportive friends on earth. And that's what Barnard is all about to me. Sure the academic part of it is valuable and important – but the real lessons aren't taught in the classroom. They are in the lounges the week of Orientation making friends that will last till Graduation. They are in the student center meeting friends at Java City. They are at 3am when your friends knock on the door crying and needing to talk.

The past year has been extremely difficult for me. Between personal and family health issues, stress, trauma and too many crises to count, I personally am amazed that I made it this far. And that is what Barnard has given me. The ability to know that I can survive anything the world might throw at me. Barnard has tested me and also given me the tools to survive. I do not leave Barnard scared of the future. I know I can handle it. And if I need a little help, it's also given me the best resources ever.

This book is dedicated to the senior class. I might not have known all of you personally, but I feel that you've impacted my life in some fashion. This book is dedicated to our class, and especially my friends – the most amazing group of women this school could unleash on the world. I love you all and I know I can never put into words how much you mean to me…so I hope this book will be a start. Look at this book when you feel alone, happy, nostalgic – whenever. But look at this book and know how much you mean to Barnard and how much you mean to me

Thank You's

Thank you to the entire College Activities Office. You were always there to answer my questions, make me smile and calm me down around deadline time.

Thank you to Will Simpkins - without you, the past two years of Mortarboard would not have been possible or as funny. Thanks for always being able to cheer me up - I owe you a moonpie!

Thank you to Cristen Scully-Kromm and the Residential Life Office and Staff for letting me work with you. Cristen, I learned so much from you and would not be the person I am today without your guidance and support. I'm always available to walk Zimmer and Tori!

Thank you to Brian from Jostens. Without you this book would not have been possible. Thank you for your patience, understanding and help this past year. I could not have done it without you - what other Rep would help with yearbook rocking out to Johnny Cash?

Thank you to the entire Mortarboard Staff - especially Ali, Rosie, Carol, Rebecca and Jen who spent so much of their year taking photos, working in the office and meeting their deadlines. Jen - I know I'm leaving the book in good hands.

Most of all, THANK YOU!!!! to Surabhi Lal in CAO. You are the best adivisor an editor could hope for. Not only have you been helpful with the book, you have been so supportive and friendly and wonderful throughout this entire year. This book is all possible because of you - and I'm sorry we never got that helicopter ride...but I have every confidence you'll be flying over the city before the year is over!

Thank you to you all for making this book possible.

To my parents, Ashley, Autumn, Kayla and Megan: I love you with all of my heart. You have taught me the meaning of unconditional love and for that I can never thank you enough...but for now...

"The time has come...to talk of others things. Of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax. Of cabbages and kings; and why the sea is boiling hot, and whether pigs have wings..."

-Lewis Carroll
